

Lawdibles: the Audio Law Professor

“A student arrives at your office hours with 10 minutes to spare. She has one question that you need to answer quickly and accurately.”

We’ll give you $100 for the ten minute recording.

Lawdible Details

Lawdibles are simple recordings of law professors speaking straightforwardly about an area of law for less than ten minutes — like answering a question during office hours.

We'll give you a $100 stipend for each ten minute recording you create for the project. And don't worry about the editing, we can take care of that. More details...

- You must be a law professor at a U.S. CALI member law school to record a Lawdible.
- You must get our explicit approval to record a Lawdible for CALI — email informal proposals (below).
- You simply record not more than ten minutes of material as if you've just been asked a specific question during office hours (we suggest you create a script).
- We add the extras like intro, outro, and theme music; and we'll edit out any problems if you stumble while you're recording.
- See cali.org/Lawdibles for examples so far including Barbara Glesner Fines on whether negligence can equal attorney incompetence and Len Biernat on contracts during pre-marital cohabitation.
- You'll also be able to follow new Lawdibles as a podcast series. We're submitting them to iTunes!

Submit your informal proposals or questions to:

Deb Quentel

CALI Dir. of Curriculum Development/Gen. Counsel

dquentel@cali.org, 312-906-5353

Find out more at www.cali.org/lawdibles