

eLangdell[®] Electronic Casebook Stimulus Project

We're creating an open repository of legal education ebooks.

We'll give you $500 to write one chapter.

eLangdell® Electronic Casebook Stimulus Project Details

With your help, CALI is stimulating the creation of an open repository of high-quality ebooks for teaching the law. And we're offering a $500 stipend per chapter when you write and contribute casebook chapters to the project. More details...

- You must be tenured or tenure track faculty at a U.S. CALI member law school.
- You must submit a one-page outline of each chapter for review and approval by an editorial committee.
- Your $500 stipend is paid upon completion of each chapter.
- All chapters will be reviewed by the CALI Editorial Board prior to publication.
- CALI will publish all chapters under a Creative Commons Attribution license to allow other faculty, students, and even the public to use your materials in their learning and teaching.
- There are limited funds available – CALI may limit the number of chapters we commission.
- It is acceptable and even welcomed for faculty to donate chapters for inclusion and publication in the Legal Education Commons.

This is a pilot project to explore new methods of educational delivery. For this project, a “chapter” is defined as the amount of material that a student is expected to read in preparation for one hour of class. Submissions for publication must include teaching notes and end-of-chapter comments and questions to assist other faculty in the adoption of your material for their courses.

Submit your one page proposals or questions to:

Deb Quentel,

CALI Dir. of Curriculum Development/Gen. Counsel

dquentel@cali.org, 312-906-5353

Updates will be posted on the CALI blog

www.cali.org/blog